

PADET Scholarships

Overview compiled by Mary Wareham

15 February 2022

Here's an overview of post-graduate scholarship funding provided by the Peace and Disarmament Education Trust (PADET) from its first grant round in 1992 through 2020. I compiled this research from PADET's public record of annual reports and the summary findings follow along with the full list of scholarship recipients.

Peace and Disarmament Education Trust Scholarships, 1992-2020

- PADET spent $774,738 funding 84 scholarships between 1992 and 2020.
- The scholarships went to 68 New Zealand students, funding 50 Masters of Arts and 18 PhDs. All received one-off grants, except for eight students who received 2 grants each and four who received 3 grants each.
- Two-thirds of the scholarship recipients were women (41) so there was gender balance. Few Maori or Pacific Islanders applied for or received PADET scholarships.
- One third (31%) of scholarships went to students at the University of Canterbury (22 students). Other scholarship recipients studied at Victoria University of Wellington (12), Otago University (10), Massey University (7), and Waikato University (7).
- The lowest number of scholarships went to students at the University of Auckland (5) and AUT (1). A similarly low number (5) of scholarships were granted to New Zealanders studying overseas at tertiary institutions in Australia, France, and UK.
- 31% of recipients studied conflict resolution and peace issues, while 28% studied nuclear disarmament (14 students) or other weapons (5). 23% studied terrorism (6), peacekeeping (4), foreign policy (2), and miscellaneous topics (4 incl. 1 MSc). The Pacific (7) accounted for 10% of topics covered.
